Kim Kardashian has responded to the unretouched bikini photos that hit the internet two days ago. In a since deleted tweet, the 36-year-old wrote, "Yup I've recently seen perspective is a b----. I'll work on taking good videos with better lighting and angles. F--- you would think I learned." The tweet was posted at 11.22pm Mexico time, but Kim deleted it a minute later. The reality star was photographed on holiday in Punta Mita, Mexico wearing a thong bikini, and the photos sparked instant debate. She's had 2 kids and still has a better body than girls around here." Piers Morgan joined in on the discussion on his breakfast show, Good Morning Britain. The outspoken 52-year-old first listened to his co-host Susanna Reid applaud Kim for the unphotoshopped photos. "I think she looks fabulous in those pictures, and I am glad that those pictures are a little more honest," she said. "I think women will embrace it. It absolutely is to be celebrated." Chris Pratt isn't hungry right now. "I just ate a chicken breast with a green juice," he tells me by phone from Tokyo. "Really went crazy, I know." For the past month, the 37-year-old goofball-turned-action hero has been documenting his strict movie diet in a series of viral Instagram videos titled simply 'What's My Snack'. "It started as kind of a joke, but now that I've swept the nation with a whole new trend I guess I'm just going to have to stay on top of it," he laughs. "Big shout out to my 'What's My Snack' peeps! You can expect more tasty snacks and hopefully I'll keep it going – but there's also the chance that I'll just never do it again." <http://milat.tv>
